

DISCOVER 'RUN' OF BOOTLEGGERS

Underground Automobile Route Between El Centro, Cal., and Phoenix, Capture of a "Runner" Heavily Laden

One of the underground, mole-like avenues of the liquor traffic between California and Arizona has been pretty well stopped up, an automobile route between Phoenix and the Imperial Valley. On Saturday afternoon Sheriff Adams arrested at Agua Caliente R. A. Reynolds who was on his way to Phoenix with eighty bottles of whiskey and two ten gallon kegs of that liquid.

For some time the sheriff's office had been apprised of the liquor traffic by that route and early Saturday morning he learned that Reynolds and his wife in an automobile had entered the state with a cargo. The sheriff and a posse went to Agua Caliente armed with warrants for the arrest of Reynolds and other parties supposed to be interested in the traffic. Arriving at Agua Caliente, the sheriff learned that Reynolds had a break down the other side of the Yuma county line. On Wednesday night Reynolds went into camp still on the other side of the line and the sheriff patiently waited at Agua Caliente. When Reynolds and his wife reached there the following morning, the former was taken into custody. No warrant was served on the woman.

Reynolds was brought to jail and locked up but later he was admitted to bail in the sum of $600 which was furnished. He had always been a rather free talker and that was what led to an investigation of the underground route. As a resident of Agua Caliente said, he was "troubled with a running off at the head." So notorious had his operations become that before the sheriff's office was notified, some of the dealers along the route refused to sell him gasoline any longer.

While in jail Reynolds, who no longer had any reason to conceal his own part in the affair, said that he had brought the liquor from El Centro. He said that not far from Dome in Yuma county he had an accident which made it necessary to send back to Dome for parts. He and his wife carried the liquor from the auto and concealed it in the brush at the road side and after a machinist had come and put the machine in running order and had got out of sight on his return they reloaded the machine and came on.

It is the opinion of the officials that the arrest of Reynolds will lead to the disclosure of a liquor traffic plot of extensive ramifications.

The value of the load now in the possession of the sheriff is estimated at about $500 at the prevailing prices of whisky in this town. It should be understood that these prices are not quoted on any open market. They range from $3 to $6 a quart. It is predicted that there will be a sharp advance putting the liquor still farther beyond the reach of all except the wealthy. It is believed though that there is a sufficient stock in the town and vicinity to put off the evil day of total abstinence for some time.

Commercial Plundering and Blundering

Is no longer so common as it was twenty years ago when a merchant bought whatever seemed salable and marked his selling prices in hieroglyphics and attempted to get the largest profits possible, on the assumption that the customer had eyes and wit enough to take care of himself.

These are days of the ever-widening new kind of storekeeping instituted here:

THE GOODS BEING RIGHTFULLY LABELED; THE PRICES BEING FIXED AND KEPT FIXED AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE RATE; THE PURCHASER BEING ENTITLED TO RECALL HIS PURCHASE IF DESIRED, OF ANYTHING SAVE SALTARY AND PERISHABLE ARTICLES. THIS STORE STANDS UP EIGHT BEFORE THE WORLD FOUR-SQUARE.
